THE ROBIN'S LAY.

BY E. C. JONES, ESQ.

Once a lovely morn in May,
The clouds were tinged with gold:
And all the green array
Of nature's garden robe
Was gladsome told
By the sweet minstrel of the wood,
The redbreast Robin.

Then from the leafy bough
Of a tall tree, at a certain distance (as often connected,) a friendship of a peculiar kind was developed; for not only with the regeneration of the sun's genial beams did the redbreast sing his song, but with the yet more lovely likeness of his own bosom, he painted in unwonted strains; so every lowly bough,
And every little spray,
Seem'd to partake the sympathetic glow;
Rather exulted in its sweet existence,
And every lovely flower
Put forth its modest head
To catch the dewy shower
Which fell in gentle showers
From the soft cloud.

Then from the bosom of the tree
Sprang forth the leaf;
And every little bird
Began to build its nest
In the sweet shade
Of the green canopy
Which nature's hand
Had spread around

Variety's the Spice of Life,
That gives it all its flavour.

Life is a waste of sore sorrow hours,
What we dare the sons of enjoyment adorn;
And the heart that is soonest awake to the flowers
Is always the first to be touched by the thorns.

Every one can and should do something for the public, if he only is kick a piece of orange peal into the road from the foot-pavement.

A THOUGHT.—The human heart is a lovely plant, surrounded and adorned with Eden beauties, wherein Religion, the heavenly Architect, may erect her house of many mansions, or Misanthrope, the worker of neighbourness, dig deep her polluted dens of crime and vice.—Anon.

An Editor, speaking of a contemporary, says that the last that was seen of him he was riding a hog to water.

The daughter of Themistocles had two lovers, the one a coxcomb, the other an honest man. The first was rich the second poor. He took the honest man for his son-in-law; for "I had rather," said he "have a man that wants wealth than wealth that wants a man."

Why is a tavern a contradiction? Because it is an Inn-consistence.

A BULL.—An Irish gentleman, whose lady had absconded from him, cautioned the public against her trusting her in these words:—"My wife has eloped from me without rhyme or reason, and I desire no one will trust her on my account, for I am not married to her."

An honest clergyman in the country was remonstrating a married couple for the frequent disunions between them, which were very unbecoming, both in the eye of God and man, seeing that they were both one. "Pray sir," said the husband; "were you to come to our door sometimes, you would think we were twenty."

Just after Sheridan had taken a new house he met Lord Guildford, to whom he said, "I will all will now go on like clock work." "Ah!" said his lordship, "tick, tick."

PLOUGHING DEEP.—Judge Coalter at Virginia, when first appointed to the bench, had jurisdiction over one of the mountain counties. The district was made up of many wild and unruly fellows. One of the Judge's first acts was to impanel a large jury, by way of example, upon a rough and hardy backwoodsman, for disorderly conduct. As the man was leaving the judicial room in charge of an officer, he turned and addressed the Judge—

"Your name is Coalter, is it not?"

"Yes."

"Well, all I have to say is, that you are setting your coalter rather too deep for a man who is ploughing new ground."

It is recorded that the fellow's wit saved the fine.

HAIR COLTSFOOT.—During a great hail storm in the town of Columbia, on the Susquehanna, in June last, some one in a tavern remarked that the hail beat a fair tune on the windows.

"Yes, and by St. Patrick," said an Irishman, "and the tune is Hail Columbia."

THE FRENCHMAN AND THE BANK.—Vat you say sare? Vill you read sare? Is dis not one ten dollar yours, sare? Vill you not pay de Farmer, sare, de shvear, de gold, de coppare?"

"We have suspended, sir, and do not redeem our notes to-day."

"Suspende: what dat—hang by de nook like one dam starving dog? Oh, sare, you no sal come me, sare, by Gar, I will shoot you out the pistle, or gun, de cannon, sare—eh? Vill you no pay de Fargot?"

No, Mr. Frenchee, we cannot redeem the note now, but will when the other banks pay them."

"Vat de others banque pay dare, sare? By Gar, de oder banque ay de same, sare! I vill not pay yours, sare! Mon Dare—Mon Dare—de mule, de ass, de cannon, sare—eh? Vill you no pay de Fargot?"

No, Mr. Frenchee, we cannot redeem the note now, but will when the other banks pay them."

"Vat de others banque pay dare, sare? By Gar, de oder banque ay de same, sare! I vill not pay yours, sare! Mon Dare—Mon Dare—de mule, de ass, de cannon, sare—eh? Vill you no pay de Fargot?"
